What is MERV?

MERV stands for Minimum Efficiency Reporting Value. It is a number from a test method organized by the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers (ASHRAE). The Number is intended to help people compare filters. Generally speaking, a higher MERV rating indicates a better filter performance. All MERV data and statements are indicative of typical properties and characteristics obtainable. MERV claims are to be used as a guide for general comparison and not as a specification. Visit ashrae.org for more details on MERV.

Why Change Air Filters?

Air filters are a front-line defense in protecting your home from airborne contaminants. By changing your air filter within the suggested life span, you are helping to prolong the life and efficiency of your HVAC system.

Life Span & Efficiency

The life and efficiency of an air filter can vary depending upon many conditions in your home. Initially, you may witness a quicker loading of particles when switching from a typical fiberglass filter to a high-efficiency filter. If so, simply replace it as needed. Failure to replace a used filter may result in a reduction in airflow and may cause damage to your HVAC system, therefore, periodic replacement is highly recommended. Results may vary in your environment.
